CRISIS AND RECOVERY; ETHICS, ECONOMICS AND JUSTICE

Tuesday September 28th 2010

Watch online and join the discussion!

Discuss on Twitter: #iq2crisis

The ongoing global financial crisis has taken the world by storm and has seen the values and ethics on which our society and economic structures are based on called into question. IQ²Interactive will be live streaming a discussion from the British Library with Rowan Williams, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Larry Elliott, Economics Editor of The Guardian, together with Zac Goldsmith MP and Robert Skidelsky to examine the role of morality and ethics in business.

Intelligence Squared (IQ²) is filming and freely livestreaming this Palgrave Macmillan event on IQ²Interactive, so you can watch live online and be as much a part of the event as if you were at the venue:

- Watch live on the IQ² website at <http://www.intelligencesquared.com/events/crisis-and-recovery>
- Also live on the iPhone, BlackBerry, or PS3 at <http://mobile.livestation.com>
- Join Reddit to kick-start the discussion – the questions which receive the most votes on our Reddit thread will be posed directly to our panel. The thread will be open until 18.00 BST on Tuesday 28 September
- Interact with fellow online viewers and pose questions for the panel through Facebook and Twitter
- The on-demand video will be available on the IQ² website and Youtube, with audio on iTunes.

Spread the word – it is free to watch online and a great opportunity to ask Rowan Williams questions.
